

Thank you for choosing Grey Harlings Restaurant for your meal today!

A short history of Grey Harlings...

Starting its life as the original clubhouse for the Royal Albert Golf Club (now the Royal Montrose Golf Club), the building was once a small cottage leased from the town's tenant on Southfield farm. By 1880, the Golf Club decided to erect another clubhouse and the cottage was purchased by Mr W.J Sandford Thompson of Marykirk. He extensively altered and changed the building into a summer house residence called "The Villa". The Royal Albert Club tried to buy the house back but Thompson refused and the building has remained privately owned ever since. From early 1930, until his death in 1975, the house was owned by Sir George Cockerill, a British Army Officer and Conservative MP. The actor Trefor Jones and his wife Anya inherited the house after Sir George's death.
